

FACES OF WASHINGTON 2016

THE FACE OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies

1740 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036 | www.sais-jhu.edu

Finding solutions to multifaceted issues like climate change, water scarcity, nuclear proliferation, terrorism, and economic development requires global leaders who can connect across all sectors: business, government, and civil society. For more than 70 years, the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) has produced graduates with the knowledge, skills, and professional network required to address the world's most pressing issues. Students customize their coursework to align with their professional interests by choosing the degree program that best fits their needs. The school's faculty in Washington, Europe and China are renowned for their scholarship and commitment to teaching, and share a single goal: to ensure that Johns Hopkins SAIS students receive the best graduate education in international relations. The result: an interconnected alumni network working to solve critical global issues. From chief executives to entrepreneurs, leaders of nongovernmental organizations to policymakers, Johns Hopkins SAIS alumni make a positive, global impact.

Above: Vali Nasr, dean of Johns Hopkins SAIS speaks with students DaQuan Lawrence and Susie Han.