A long time fixture on Washingtonian Magazine's Top Lawyers list, David Bulitt has been praised as a divorce attorney who “epitomizes stability and old fashioned common sense”. One client referred to him as to him as “the best non-shaving, motorcycle-riding, bourbon-drinking, non-lawyer, lawyer I know”. Bulitt is a principal in the law firm of Joseph, Greenwald and Laake, PA. With his four daughters growing up, Bulitt found himself with some extra evening and weekend time on his hands. After several years of keeping notes on napkins and notepads, his first novel, CARD GAME, was published in 2015 to scores of five star reviews. “Most books written by lawyers are thrillers or mysteries. I stick with what I know - day to day life, real issues, real lives,” Bulitt says. One reader wrote that CARD GAME “is an eloquently woven journey of adolescent memories and present day realities.” His law practice flourishing, Bulitt spends his spare time enjoying regular visits with local book clubs and is hard at work on his next novels.
